

Demo answer: transitions

The writer first explains that libraries provide quiet places to study. However, the next sentence shows that libraries also build community by offering clubs and public events. The transition signals a contrast between individual study and shared activities.