

Demo answer: revision

The conclusion would be more persuasive if it restated the main claim and ended with a clear call to action. For example, the writer could ask readers to volunteer one afternoon each month. This ending reminds the reader what to do next and connects the argument to a practical result.